

ADVERTISEMENT

See how a can becomes a new can at IWantToBeRecycled.org

KEEP AMERICA BEAUTIFUL

Give your garbage another life. Recycle.

Adam Camp

Dance troupe grooves to funky sound

ADVERTISEMENT

SARA BAUKNECHT PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE

To some people, dance is just footsteps,

4:00 AM

APR 27, 2011

jerks and arm motions. To David

Norman, it's something more: a form of

SUBSCRIBE

LOGIN

REGISTER

SEARCH

"Time spent dancing is not time spent hurting. That's my theory," said the New York City-based choreographer.

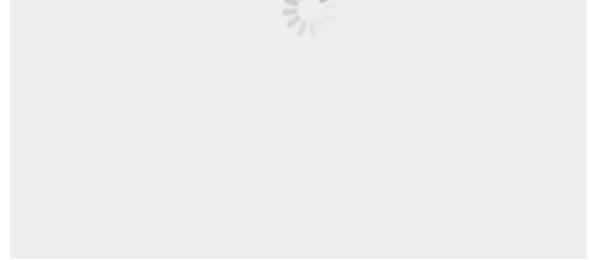

'Prophets of Funk'

- Where: Byham Theater, Downtown.
- When: 8 p.m. Saturday.
- Tickets: $19-$45; www.pgharts.org or 412-456-6666.
- Information: A Q&A with David Dorfman Dance artists will follow the performance. www.daviddorfmandance.org.

The improv-infused modern repertoire of his modest-sized company, David Dorfman Dance, is a type of "kinetic diplomacy," he said, that challenges audiences to take a closer look at themselves and their surroundings.

A recent attempt at this feat is "Prophets of Funk," which will close the Pittsburgh Dance Council's 2010-11 season on Saturday at the Byham Theater, Downtown.

In 1996, the Dance Council sponsored one of David Dorfman Dance's first Pittsburgh performances. Since then, the troupe has graced local stages a few more times, including collaborations in the late '90s at the Byham Theater with Dance Alloy while it was under the direction of Mark Taylor. In recent years, Mr. Dorfman has kept busy performing and teaching dance at

Four Quick Questions

Do you think the backlash 'Flip or Flop' star Christina El Moussa is facing for posting a photo of her daughter in a bikini is warranted?

- Yes
- No
- No strong opinion

Next

Post-Gazette Question

LATEST AE

Stage AE adds 3 shows, including Echo & the Bunnymen, Violent Femmes

Five advertisers pull out of Bill O'Reilly's Fox News show

10 authors to speak in the 2017-18 Ten Evenings lecture series

Columbus author Robin Yocum returns with 'A Welcome Murder'

CMU grad Lilli Passero knockout round, switches teams on 'The Voice'

TOP

is in residence and he chairs the dance department.

This weekend, the group has something new for Pittsburgh, an hour-long program set to the music of the soul, funk and rock band Sly and the Family Stone. It deals with embracing love and hope, even when life gets difficult, and is the latest installment in a trilogy of works about racial identity, freedom and political activism, Mr. Dorfman said.

"Prophets of Funk" takes audiences back to the '60s and '70s with its rainbow of psychedelic costumes and groovy moves. Steps range from refined and balletic to more jazz-like.

"I think the style is kind of a very athletic funk that refers to some of our modern and post-modern training," he said.

There also will be lots of partnering, pelvic thrusts and kick ball changes inspired by Mr. Dorfman's disco days. Some audience members may even be tapped to join in the dancing, he said.

"The idea is ... that we're showing with our bodies that anything is possible."

Some of the company's eight artists will accompany Mr. Dorfman on stage. One with Pittsburgh roots is Kyle Abraham

AP source: Cowboys' Romo retiring, replacing Simms at CBS

Bills players buying in to McDermott's focused message

Vikings sign backup QB Case Keenum

Detroit Lions sign linebacker Nick Bellore

Los Angeles Chargers are still in San Diego through June

... MORE

HOME 🏠

ADVERTISEMENT

ADVERTISEMENT

SUBSCRIBE

LOGIN

REGISTER

SEARCH

Academy and Pittsburgh's Creative and Performing Arts high school. This tour is likely one of Mr. Abraham's last with the troupe because he plans to devote more time to his own New York company, Abraham.In.Motion, Mr. Dorfman said.

The performers with their bell bottom jeans and Afro hairdos shouldn't be perceived as fluffy fun. The characters aren't as one-dimensional as they seem. Audiences are tasked with figuring out their depths as they evolve, which Mr. Dorfman compares to peering past the stereotypes society sometimes chains to people.

But everyone isn't expected to take away the same message from the production - or even have a passion for dance.

"It's really for everyday people," Mr. Dorfman said. "You don't need to know anything about dance to come enjoy our show."

Archives PGe
 Advertising RSS Feeds
 Email Newsletter Corrections
 Contact Us Technical Help
 Site Map Products & Services
 Subscriber Services Terms of Use
 About Us Privacy Policy

Copyright © 1997-2017 PG Publishing Company, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

COMMENTS DISABLED FOR THIS STORY

MUST READ

Starkey's Mailbag: Is Jarvis Jones the worst draft pick of the Mike

SUBSCRIBE

LOGIN

REGISTER

SEARCH

The Digs: Rudolph's big day in the city

LOCAL

Tony Norman: The Arkansas way of execution

OPINION

TRENDING

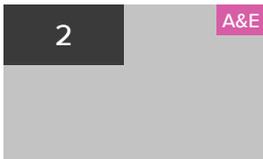

1

SPORTS

Ron Cook: Penn State's Sandusky nightmare just gets worse

Tue, Apr 4, 2017, 12:00am Ron Cook

2

A&E

Five advertisers pull out of Bill O'Reilly's Fox News show

Tue, Apr 4, 2017, 11:23am Katie Mettler

3

SPORTS

Starkey's Mailbag: Is Jarvis Jones the worst draft pick of the Mike Tomlin era?

Tue, Apr 4, 2017, 11:00am Joe Starkey

4

NEWS

Pa. mom died after half-marathon from internal hemorrhage

Tue, Apr 4, 2017, 11:09am Mari A. Schaefer

5

SPORTS

Sidney Crosby 'disappointed' but doesn't rule out competing in 2018 Olympics

TOP

SUBSCRIBE

LOGIN

REGISTER

SEARCH

